STATEMENT

(In the space below, please provide the showing of unavoidable delay recited in paragraph 8 above.)

The firm of James & Franklin applied for and obtained the instant patent. After issuance and payment of the first maintenance fee on January 9, 2003, James & Franklin merged in 2004 with the firm of Bazerman & Drangel P.C. to form the firm of Epstein Drangel Bazerman & James LLP (recently renamed Epstein Drangel LLP), and concurrently moved into new offices. As part of the merger, all of the patent files of James & Franklin, which had formerly been docketed in a handwritten docketing system, were transferred into the system used by Bazerman & Drangel. This process involved a team of clerks sorting through hundreds of distinct files and 1) providing a new docket number for each file, 2) entering the identifying data and controlling dates (for example priority date, filing date, and/or issuance date) into a new electronic docketing system, and 3) associating the matter with the customer number, reflecting the new address, for the new firm. The electronic docketing system calculates maintenance fee due dates and generates reminders to attorneys and staff based on issuance dates, among other things.

Despite the institution of several checks in this process, and for an unknown reason which is still being investigated, the information related to the instant patent is not in the new electronic docketing system and the physical file cannot be located. Accordingly, the electronic docketing system did not generate, and no one at the firm received, a reminder that the second maintenance fee for this patent was due. Further, this matter was not associated with the customer number for the new firm. Since the correspondence address for this file was not updated with the USPTO to reflect the new address of the new firm, the USPTO would have sent the Maintenance Fee Reminder to the old address for James & Franklin. As a result, the new firm did not receive the Maintenance Fee Reminder from the USPTO. Therefore, the second maintenance fee, which was due at the latest on July 20, 2007, was not paid, which was an unavoidable result under these circumstances. Epstein Drangel LLP identified that the instant patent became abandoned two days ago as a result of a review of Public PAIR while preparing a new patent application for the client. The undersigned immediately prepared and filed this petition, and is concurrently conducting a review of all records entered during the merger.
